

The Centre for Restorative Justice

Open Training Calendar 2009

The Centre for Restorative Justice is a not for profit, non government organisation that formed in 1997 amidst significant community feeling that different approaches to justice were needed to ensure the current system did not continue to generate damage and harm, significantly victims of crime and the poor treatment of victims by the justice system.

The Centre provides specific training to schools/business/workplaces and groups such as legal practitioners.

In addition the below workshops are offered and available to a cross section of participants.

ALL workshops are limited in capacity and include meals or refreshments as appropriate.
